The memories of Mince Pie night are rapidly fading away but I think everyone had a pleasant evening and hopefully a good Christmas afterwards.

Alan and Barbara spent a very different Christmas from their usual one at Sharm el Seikh. They volunteered to help various charities to provide Christmas Dinner for people on their own. Barbara said she was happy to help as long as she did not have to cook. A good dinner was provided for 120 people in a church hall and another 70 were delivered. Everyone also went home with a goodie bag. Alan said they enjoyed it especially as everybody was very appreciative.

A couple of days after Christmas quite a few Museum members had a lunch at Bengoe.

Apparently, despite the New Year's Day gathering at Barrington being officially finished, a lot of cars still went there.

The Bentley day was at the Holiday Inn at Markyate but only about thirty cars were in attendance as the weather was rather unpleasant.

By all accounts the biggest New Year meeting takes place at Stony Stratford which gets absolutely packed.

The Museum's Autojumble was very busy with about five hundred people through the gate.

We are going to hold a Jaguar day at the Museum again this year. It will be on March 27th, which is Easter Sunday. I have contacted Steve Fermor to ask him to put an advert in February and March issues of Jaguar Driver and, nearer the time, I expect Keith O will put one in Classic Car Weekly.

Just a reminder that Area 57 will be celebrating it's 30th Anniversary this year, so any suggestions for marking the occasion are welcome. Eric and Margot are going to find out details about a boat trip on the Lea with a meal.

It appears that the format for the show at Cuffley will be different this August, taking place on the Saturday and Sunday and not August Bank Holiday Monday. The steamers and horses will not be there but possibly an autojumble and French Market. (N.B. The Sunday is now advertised as a normal open day at the Museum. Roy).

The Parade of Light in Enfield at the end of last year raised £800 each for three different charities.
