February 2017

Well, once again it's the time of year when we start getting dates to add to our calendar;

We have been invited to a celebratory launch of a classic car restoration apprenticeship programme and open day. It is taking place on March 12th from 12.30 to 5pm at Unit 1 Baird Road, Enfield. This is a state of the art body and paint training facility and many classic car owners will be displaying their cars. Examples of work carried out by apprentice students will be on display in the workshop, and a variety of car maintenance displays will be taking place. A complimentary lunch will be provided so, if you are interested, Doug needs names by this weekend so that he can get back to the organiser, Kevin Haggarty.

Two weeks later, on 26th March, our Jaguar Day at the Whitewebbs Museum takes place. It is advertised in the current Jaguar Driver and will also be in the March issue. It should also be in Classic Car Weekly nearer the time. This is our third show and unfortunately, once again, it clashes with Mothers' Day and also Spares Day at Stoneleigh. As we have always felt that this date is rather early in the year, Keith O has managed to get us booked in for the last Sunday in July, NEXT YEAR.

If anyone would like Keith W to book seats on Friday March 10th, for "Made in Dagenham", which Alan is in, please give Keith a ring. Tickets cost £14 each.

I have booked Breakfast at the Bocket Arms, Ayot St Lawrence on April 30th and I will need names and numbers by mid April please.

The Kimbolton Fayre, which we always feel is one of the best shows as it features so much more than Classic Cars, takes place on July 9th. I have ordered some passes which I should receive in March or April. Also on July 9th, there is a Classic Car Show at Hatfield House.

Both Eric and Richard F can highly recommend a show called Flywheel. It takes place on June 24th & 25th just outside Bicester, on an area that was once a Bomber Command airfield. There are vintage buildings, lots of cars, flying displays, music and food. Tickets are available online in advance for £23 or £28 on the day. Google "Flywheel 2017" to book tickets.

On 15th/16th September, a few of us are booked for a weekend at a hotel near Loughborough, Quorn Grange. If anyone would like me to see if there are any more rooms available, please give me a ring.
